NEVER CEASING MARVEL

MANY HEAR FROM LIPS OF EVANGELIST HOW GOD SEEKS SINNERS

Despite the rain and the unfavorable weather a congregation of people hungry for the word of God came out to hear it by the mouth of Evangelist Habbick. "Adam where art thou?" Gen. 4:9, was the foundation of his message.

It matters but little what may be the text. Every true preacher must bring us up to God through his son Jesus Christ. Here is a strange, a marvelous thing: God seeking a sinner. The ordinary, the natural thing would be the sinner seeking God.

The sinner is the offender. He has mistreated God, disregarded his word, disobeyed his command, listened to a lie against him, brought upon himself all the awful avalanche of the slime of sin, and yet God is seeking him. God called aloud, "Adam, where art thou?" Not that he needed to find Adam, but that Adam might know that he could not hide from God. This knowledge is a source of joy and comfort to a saved man, but it is hard and bitter to the sinner.

There was sin in Adam's heart and he ought to have been seeking God and crying out for mercy. If sinners could realize the awfulness of sin, they would fall on their faces before any audience that was ever gathered and cry for mercy. When they make the cry God who waits hears and answers the call.

A sinner is a dead man, dead in trespasses and sin, and when he come to God he must die another death before God can accept him, he must die to self and become a new man in Christ Jesus. I am glad Adam came out in his poor little flimsy fig leaf covering he had made for himself. God brushed it aside and made him a covering of skins, but God's covering meant death, death of an animal prefiguring the death of the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. Sinner, if you want to be saved you've got to come under the blood, you can't get away from it and be right with God. When God covers you, you are covered all over and you know you are a sinner saved by grace, saved from hell. God calls to another class of Adams, the backsliders. The book tells about them and how God loves them and is always calling to them because he knows the devil is drawing them back that he may show his hatred toward God. Backslider, you see whom you are hurting by your backsliding, whom you are pleasing. Confess your sin, get right with God. If the sin is against your fellowman make it right with him, don't think to cover it with the blood while you are withholding your part. If you have stolen, make it good; if you have lied, confess it to the one you lied about; attend to your part of the business and God will attend to his. If you will let him, God by the Holy Spirit will come into your heart and free you not only from the guilt, but from the power of the sin. Sin shall not have dominion over you, the Holy Spirit can keep you day by day from known, conscious and premeditated sin. This is the life of victory in Christ Jesus our Lord. Is it any wonder that a preacher who knows this by actual experience shouts Glory to God and acts like he was happy through and through. Adam, have you received the Holy Spirit since you believed? If you haven't why haven't you? He is yours for the taking, take him just as you did Jesus Christ as your Savior. If there are any here who want to take the Holy Spirit in his fullness and his power in your life are you willing to come to the front and kneel down to receive him according to his promise? Many came forward and did receive him on faith in his word without regard to feeling or lack of feeling. God was glorified last night and he will be in the coming days in salvation of sinners by the blood of Jesus Christ.

BECOMES A CITIZEN

BUILDS MAUSOLEUM

MR. AMBROSINI WILL ERECT LARGEST BURIAL VAULT IN UNITED STATES

Anthony Ambrosini of St. Paul, Minn., who has large property interests in Southern California and usually spends a portion of the winter here, is again in Glendale and is located at the new Easton hotel. Mrs. Ambrosino, who usually accompanies her husband to California, is detained at home this winter by a severe illness. Mr. Ambrosini will remain here until the first of April. He owns several residences in Glendale and ranch property elsewhere and will spend the time looking after his interests.

Mr. Ambrosini left pleasant weather in Minnesota for the season. The weather is cold and there is much snow. He came by way of Seattle and Tacoma in order to transact some business in connection with the large mausoleum he is building. Mr. Ambrosini is the owner of the beautiful Forest cemetery in St. Paul and he has plans for erecting therein the largest and most magnificient mausoleum in the United States. The entire structure will cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $150,000 and will contain space for 1564 crypts. The contract for the marble for the interior has been let to the Vermont Marble company for $39,000. The granite for the exterior will cost $40,000 and the front doors of solid bronze will require an expenditure of $1850. The structure will require forty cars of cement, 30 tons of steel, 35 cars of granite and 22 cars of marble.

After his return to St. Paul, Mr. Ambrosini will personally supervise the erection of the mausoleum. Forty men will be employed in the erection of the structure, day and night forces being kept constantly at work in order to complete the building within a year.

The mausoleum will contain space for 1564 crypts, space for each crypt to cost from $200 to $500. Private vaults sell for from $6000 to $10,000. Already $60,000 worth of space has been sold in the mausoleum. The structure will of course be built upon architectural lines appropriate for such a structure and when complete will be a most magnificent building and worthy as a last resting place for kings.

KING SENDS ULTIMATUM

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS TO BE SEVERED UNLESS REBELLION CEASES

"The King of the Universe has sent an ultimatum to the world calling upon all to render allegiance to Him, and informing them that diplomatic relations with heaven are to be severed at once unless they renounce their rebellious conduct." This, in substance, was the statement of Evangelist Celian Andross in his discourse last night at Evangel hall, 115 South San Fernando road.

"In the universe, over which God proclaims himself king, there has sprung up a rebellion," continued the evangelist. "Satan, once a mighty representative of the throne, desired the pre-eminence. War in heaven followed, and Lucifer, 'the covering cherub,' was expelled, taking up his abode on the earth. Here he usurped the rulership given to our first parents and is called by the Apostle Paul in 2 Corinthians 4: 3, 4, 'the god of this world.'

"Mankind has rendered almost universal fealty to this revolter, and so has joined in the sedition. But the King of Kings, through the glorious plan of salvation, found a means of extending amnesty to men. 'For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'

" 'Come now and let us reason together,' he says, 'though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.'

" 'Now, then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us. We pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.' God is dealing with men through ambassadors just as earthly governments deal with one another.

"In the past, whenever the rebellion on the earth has been carried to such an extent that God must visit swift judgment upon the despisers of his mercy, he has always sent his ambassadors to warn the rebels of impending judgment. In the days of Noah God warned the inhabitants of the earth for 120 years before punishment was finally executed. Although the punishment was delayed, it was none the less sure, and when the day came, the door of the ark was closed, and all who had rejected the warning were outside. The fact that the entire world, with the exception of eight souls, had refused to heed the warning, did not deter god from executing the judgment.

"In the days of Lot the ambassadors from heaven were sent to Sodom. The city was warned. Lot and his family heeded the message and fled, but with the exception of these few souls, the entire city suffered the vengeance of consuming fire.

"It is not surprising to find that God has, in our day, sent to the world through his ambassadors a warning, the most solemn any people ever have received. The Apostle Paul reasoned with the ruler, Felix, of a judgment to come, and Felix trembled; but God's ambassadors today proclaim upon the authority of the Divine Word that the hour of God's judgment is come—it is here. In Revelation 14:6-11 is found God's ultimatum to the world.

" 'Fear God, and give glory to Him, for the hour of his judgment is come,' are the solemn words, 'and worship Him that made heaven and earth and the sea, and the fountains of water.' Again the warning is given against surrendering the mind to the arch rebel, and against giving assistance to his cause. Of the person who refuses to surrender to heaven we read, 'The same shall drink of the wrath of God which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation, and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb.'

"In the days of Noah, God said, 'My spirit shall not always strive with men.' For 120 years their probation was extended. So today the time of probation will have an end. Soon the final word, as recorded in Revelation 22: 11, 12, will be given, 'He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And, behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.' At that time Amos 8: 9-12 tells us there will be a famine, not for bread or water, but for hearing the Word of God. Today, before it is forever too late, God still pleads, 'Turn ye, turn ye from your wicked way, for why will ye die.' Today repentance is acceptable with heaven and pardon is extended to all who seek it."

Tonight at 7:45 Evangelist Philip L. Knox will speak on "Our Future Home: Will We Eat, Sleep and Work There?" Sunday night the subject will be "Capital and Labor." Several instrumental numbers will be rendered Sunday night.

LETTER FROM FRONT

LES MEYER RECEIVES MESSAGE FROM CHUM IN ALLIES' TRENCHES

A letter just received by Les Meyer, of the Overland Agency, from one of his friends who is "somewhere in France," gives us a very vivid idea of just how strict the authorities are regarding what mail is sent from the war zone and also what is said in the mail that is allowed to be sent. The party who wrote the letter and his brother left Montreal, Canada, a short time after the war broke out and enlisted with the Canadian Field artillery, and although he and Mr. Meyer had been intimate "pals" for a long time, he has been unable to get but two letters through to Mr. Meyer, as it is against the rules for soldiers to correspond with persons in the U. S. A. or other neutral countries except in extreme necessity. The letter was dated Dec. 27th, 1916, and was only delivered to Mr. Meyer yesterday and said:

"Dear Les—Just a few lines to let you know that I received your card and I would have written long ago, old man, had it not been for the restrictions over here. We are not allowed to correspond with persons in the U. S. A. or other neutral countries except in cases of extreme necessity—when the letter has to be censored by the officer commanding or the writer is put on his honor. I am not permitted even to give you my battery number or station, but as you already have my address here I won't have to.

We have fairly comfortable quarters here and like everything pretty well except the bad weather. It rains about six days a week, sometimes seven. I am taking a chance, Les, on getting this short note through to you through someone in Montreal, but there isn't much I can tell you without getting myself into serious trouble so you will see my position.

I hope you are all keeping well and that you will write again, and I do hope that this reaches you O. K. In the meantime I will close with best regards to you all in which Frank joins.

Your old pal,

ALBERT.

"Well," said Les Meyer, "really all that a person is allowed to know from anyone at the front is that they have at least one hand left to write with, because with restrictions as severe as they are, all that they can write about is the weather. I know that he could tell me a lot of interesting news if it were allowed to go through, but there isn't a chance of ever hearing it until the war is over. The letter had absolutely no heading with the exception of the date, so I haven't any idea where his battery is located, except "somewhere in France." Any mail to him must be addressed to the Army Postoffice at London, Eng., and they forward it to the location his company happens to be, and it is, of course, censored before he receives it, and it depends what is said in the letter as to whether or not he receives it at all. The letter he wrote to me was mailed to someone in Montreal, Canada, who in turn reposted it to me, but even with all the restrictions and censorship, the letter reveals one pleasant thing, that he is at least still alive."

GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1917

CHILD LABOR SUNDAY

The American Humane Education Society has set the last Sunday in January as Child Labor Sunday. It is a pity that it is necessary to educate men and women regarding child labor and how dearly it is costing the human race. Few people, outside of those actually engaged in lines of work for the welfare of childhood, know much about the child labor laws. It is comfortabe to know that our state has a child labor law. Many states have statutes designed to protect childhood and they are enforced to the degree demanded by public opinion. But child labor is not a local or state question. It is a national question and a national disgrace. It involves two million children who are robbed of their schooling and playtime in order to satisfy the greed of soulless men. We may have a child labor law in this state but child laborers of other states help to make some of the things we eat and wear. To-day more than a million child laborers are toiling eleven, twelve and thirteen hours and to-night while we sleep the night shifts of children in factories and even in mines will contribute something for the world's use to-morrow. Eight hours work each day is considered long enough for a strong man or woman. Add to the longer hours noise, lint, bad ventilation and tension and what chance have these little slaves of becoming physically or mentally strong men and women?

We who sit comfortably back knowing our own children have more than enough to eat and wear, that provision has been made for their proper development along all lines, should be appalled and ashamed could we see the procession of child laborers dismissed at the close of their daily or nightly toil. The weakest of these children die, the fittest survive to become the parents of the next generation of children, weaker mentally and physically than the present generation.

The child labor problem and the problem of the unemployed are related. Sometimes the parents lose their jobs, which are given to their own children at a quarter of the wage. An awful condition to exist in a civilized nation, that millions of young children should be forced to unheard-of toil at a wage that permits existence only while unemployed adults beg for work. It is well to set aside a day to consider this horror that invests this land.

BUY CALIFORNIA-MADE AND CALIFORNIA-GROWN PRODUCTS

Representatives of the California Home Industry League, organized for the purpose of encouraging manufactures in this state and in encouraging the use of California-made articles among the people of the state, call attention to the fact that there was a phenomenal growth of the state's factory output during the year 1916. More new factories were opened up in California during 1916 than during any previous year. In some sections the factory-employe population increased a hundred per cent. while in addition the factories already established sold more products in 1916 than during any other year of the state's history.

Particular attention is called to the fact that this progress coming during the year following the expositions when a business slump was predicted is not a prosperity due to the war, such as some eastern communities are enjoying, but is real substantial growth due to natural causes. Not only did the post-exposition slump fail to materialize but the records of the state were completely broken in all lines of home industry.

While some of this increased business is due to the export of California-made products, the feature of the year's activities is the enormous increase in the sale and consumption within the boundaries of the state of the things grown and made here, with a consequent falling off in the goods impoprted for local consumption. According to many dealers who have been questioned, this increase of home products is due to the specific demand of women shoppers for things made in California. The Home Products League gives much credit to the newspapers of the state in their efforts to educate the people as to the benefits that accrue from giving preference to goods made or grown within the state, when making purchases.

THE FAIR PLAY PLAN

The management of the Evening News is very much in favor of fair play when it comes to allowing every man in a community to act and talk as he pleases, providing his acting and and talking do not interfere with the rights of others. The columns of the Evening News are open to articles from men and women who wish to present constructive argument. If you have something good to present,—something that has the build-up spirit, the Evening News wants your communication.

The columns of the Evening News are not open to the tear-down communications,—the destructive kind,—those that devote space to telling about the faults of men and creeds instead of giving fundamental truths. There is room in this world for people to have an opportunity to do good, without it being necessary for one person to spend time tearing down the good others have done.

Mr. Citizen,—be very sure your own garden is well cultivated, and your neighbor should be allowed the privilege of caring for his garden. The very wholesome rule of every man minding his own business has a good effect on a community.

WHY JEOPARDIZE LIFE?

Several columns of city papers have been taken up for the past few days giving an account of a man and his wife enduring great suffering in a snow storm on the mountains between Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson.

There are eight months of the year when mountain trips may be taken with safety, and why go on a hiking expedition at the time of a mountain snow storm?

There is a time for everything and the time to take this trip is when it can be taken without risk of life.

THE MALE CHARACTERS OF CYMBELINE

The Shakespeare section of the Tuesday Afternoon club have been enjoying some excellent papers in their study of the great dramatist. At a recent meeting papers on Cymbeline which the section has been studying were read. The following on the male characters of the play was read by Mrs. Charles E. Norton:

In commenting on character we should take into account the environments of the individual. In the writings of Shakespeare we are confronted with characters without parallel in the present age, and as we read his words and see portrayed by living characters on the stage we naturally contrast the environments of the past with the present.

In the male characters delineated in Cymbeline we are led from palace to cave, from velvet to skins of wild beast. We look upon characters moulded by intellect of master minds to that of the servile being who had no mind but that of his master.

The characters presented are Cymbeline, Cloten, Posthumus, Pisanio, Iachimo, Belarious, Guiderious and Arviragus. Cymbeline the king of Britain's strength of character is manifested in his fight against the denomination of Rome, his weakness in domination by his wife, his charity in the forgiveness of the marriage of his daughter, his benevolence in many acts of kindness to his servitors.

Cloten, the son of the queen by a former marriage, is a man past thirty and dissipated,. Some writers and critics speak of him as an imbecile, and a spoiled boy. He was evidently of violent temper, selfish in his desires, indifferent to the sufferings of others. We must not overlook that he no doubt inherited some of his vicious traits from his mother.

Posthumus, husband of Imogen, was a poor but well descended gentleman who had been left an orphan in infancy and had been reared by the king. Some writers speak of him as being a scholar, some say not. He had a mild disposition, even temper and forgiving spirit that is demonstrated in the last act when Iachimo pleads with him to take his life and he answers:

"Kneel not to me!
The power that I have on you is to spare you.
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live
And deal with others better."

On the other side we find that he is unable to maintain his peace of mind in his action with Iachimo and firmly believes Imogen is unfaithful. Knowing her as he did he should have been sure before condemning, which shows he was relatively weak.

Iachimo, an Italian in nothing so much perhaps as ingenuity and boldness, a man of craftiness and strength of mind, but not cruel. After his victory in the winning of the wager from Posthumus it brought a changed feeling towards his victim. He admires Imogen and realizes and knows her worth the same as we do and we must give him credit for it. Also his contrition in the last act.

Pisaino was a servant in the king's household. He was the faithful, honest servant, always intending to do good, but he often brought suffering and peril upon those whom he was endeavoring to save and unite. He often prevaricates—acquired that in his long years of service, but he does it squarely. He was a man of strong mind, of discriminating judgment and a diplomat.

Belarious was a banished lord, a man past middle life (with a long white beard). When he kidnaps the two sons of the king his intentions were only reyenge and destruction, but we find he has unconsciously and involunatrily saved the two princes from the queen. We also find that he didn't carry out his original plan, for his better nature prevented it. He trained the princes into splendid youths and in every way worthy to be rulers. He was a man of great strength of mind. The generous big heart is amply demonstrated by his love for Guiderous and Arviragus.

To my mind Belarious possessed the strongest character in the court. Guiderous and Arvigarus are the two sons of Cymbeline (The king gave them Latin names, as he had lived in Rome and was knighted by Augustus, which accounts for it). They were also known as Polydore and Cadwal. They were about 22 and 20 years old, exceptional youths. The eldest, Guiderous, was the strongest mentally, and generaly had his way. They were both patriots and were brave soldiers, kind and humane.

Cornelius, a physician to the court, did what was best. He made his potion to produce long sleep, but not death. He deceived the queen in this, but didn't have a crime on his conscience.

After the business meeting a beautifully appointed luncheon was served and was greatly enjoyed by all present. The program for the afternoon consisted of two papers, one on "California Forestry," read by Mrs. Jean Wilde, and the other on "California Mining," read by Mrs. Nellie Case. The guests for the afternoon were Mrs. C. E. Russell and Mrs. Charles Temple of Chapter L.

Mrs. J. H. Seaman of 112 North Central avenue, Tropico, left this morning for Chicago, where she will be met by her husband and will visit relatives for a few weeks. Misses Eloise and Jeannette Seaman are students in the Glendale high school and Joseph Seaman is attending grammar school. The Seamans have a wide circle of friends in Glendale and Tropico who will regret to learn of their contemplated departure.

In spite of the small attendance owing to the inclement weather a very enjoyable meeting was held. Mrs. Keith Stevens sang two solos, Miss Genevieve Mulligan played the violin and Mrs. A. W. Blyth favored those present with a few very enjoyable readings. At the close of the afternoon light refreshments were served.

She is very prominent in club work and social work, having raised $2500 for a building in her home city in which alien women are taught to read, to care for their homes and babies and to do marketing. These ladies are old friends of Mrs. Braley and all were most happy in meeting again. Mrs. Braley was able to come to the dining room for luncheon with her friends for the first time in six months.

HARD TIMES PARTY

The Tropico Acacia Avenue School Mothers' club instead of holding its regular monthly meeting was given a hard times party by the fathers and husbands on Friday evening at G. A. R. hall. About 200 invitations had been sent out and there were about 160 present. The greater part of the evening was spent in dancing, for which Busch's orchestra furnished the music, and the dances were interspersed with a number of enjoyable readings and musical selections. The grand march which took place before the three judges resulted in the following prizes being awarded for the best "rig outs": First prize, a 50-pound sack of flour to Mrs. J. W. Bennett; first gentleman's prize, lug box of potatoes to Mr. W. C. Wattles; consolation prize, a large tin dipper, to T. B. Curtis. A splendid supper was also added to the enjoyment of a very delightful evening. An admittance charge of 25 cents had been charged and after paying expenses, the gentlemen handed the club $10 to add to the payment on the grafanola they are purchasing. The guests as well as the members voted the fathers and husbands royal hosts and hoped for a repetition of such pleasant occasions. A masquerade is spoken of as one of the future possible events to be given in a month or two.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Clem Moore of 1468 W. 2nd St. entertained at 6 o'clock dinner recently in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Black, celebrating their 36th wedding anniversary. The flowers used were pink carnations and ferns. The place cards were decorated with small brides and grooms. After an elegant dinner the evening passed all too quickly in pleasant conversation. Those who pronounced it one of the most enjoyable times in their memory were the honored ones, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Black, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Priaulx, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ravenscroft and the host and gracious hostess.

Pierce will have for his subject "Wide World Peace and How to Obtain It." Miss Gertrude Champlain and Miss Susine Wessels of Glendale will furnish music. There will be a box lunch at noon, coffee to be furnished. Every member of the P. T. A. is invited. A good time to get acquainted and learn more of this work.

Mrs. W. W. McElroy entertained informally Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. J. S. Olin and daughter of Belleville, Ohio. Those invited were friends who have house guests for the winter, about twenty in all. Among those present were Mrs. T. F. McCrea, sister of Mrs. Cernon Cowsert, who has recently returned from fourteen years spent in China. Mrs. McCrea was very interesting in her description of the manner of living , the costumes worn and the slow means of transportation in vogue in that country.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Playing under severe disadvantage on a strange court, Glendale's lightweight basketball team yesterday defeated Pasadena by a score of 48 to 19.

The game was scheduled to be played at Glendale, but an eleventh hour shift was made, and our team journeyed to the Crescent City for the conflict. But few Glendale rooters made the journey because of the change.

Pasadena proved to have a fast squad of basket shooters, but the Glendale boys outplayed them the entire game. Had our team been able to shoot baskets as a championship team should, the result would have been even more one-sided. Glendale's team is M. Powers, W. Beach, R. Brown, D. Bryant, F. Powers and G. Richards.

The percentage of paid up student body dues this year is lower than that of previous years, according to the statement of student body officers made in the general assembly yesterday.

Herbert Scheuner, president, and Aileen Preeman, treasurer, addressed the school on school spirit as manifested in payment of school dues. The question was asked, how can we carry on these activities for your benefit and the benefit of the school without money?

Attention was called to the fact that Glendale's student body dues are far below the average.

Principal Moyse announced several new classes which will be formed next semester for the benefit of G. U. H. S. students.

The bad weather has put a check on baseball and track practice. Our athletes are compelled to resort to the gym to keep in training.

Miss Fish, instructor in the biological sciences, who has been ill, is again at her post.

Miss Poppy of the English department is on the sick list. She is rapidly recovering from the effects of a minor operation.

Mr. Ferguson, head of the H. S. Vodevil committee, announces that the Vodevil this year will be held on Feb. 15-16. This committee is working overtime in an effort to make this year's performance the best the school has ever given. It will pay to mark these dates in your note book.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE HEALING

Glendale News, Glendale, Cal.

To the Editor: In view of a news item which appeared in the Glendale News of the 8th inst. relating to the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the case of Crane vs. Governor Johnson, et al, in which item the inference is drawn that Christian Science healing and drugless healing are similar, I am asking that you will kindly allow me space in your paper for the following:

The Medical Practice Act of the State of California provides: "Nor shall this act be construed so as to discriminate against any particular school of medicine or surgery, or any other treatment, nor to regulate, prohibit or to apply to, any kind of treatment by prayer, nor to interfere in any way with the practice of religion." Attempts to have this act declared unconstitutional have been defeated in all the state courts. The United States District Court was then asked to issue an injunction restraining the governor of the state and the district attorney of Los Angeles county from enforcing certain provisions of this law. The district court refused to issue the injunction and the matter was taken on appeal to the United States Supreme Court, which upheld the law and confirmed the decision of the state courts and of the United States District Court.

It will be observed that the healing of the sick by prayer, or by means of the practice of religion, is open to any person in this state who is honestly engaged in such practice. What constitutes treatment by prayer as contrasted with the unknown methods that may go under the name of drugless healing is not only well known to the general public, but has been well settled by legal decisions in a number of states. The same thing is true as to what constitutes treatment of the sick in connection with the practice of religion.

In the case recently decided by the United States Supreme Court Christian Scientists did not appear as either plaintiffs or defendants; they were only interested in seeing that the high court had before it the truth as to what constitutes the practice of Christian Science and its relation to the exceptions in the California statute—that is, that Christian Scientists are not drugless healers in the sense that the plaintiff in the case averred himself to be, but that Christian Scientists are in truth healing "by prayer" and by means of the "practice of religion."

Thanking you for your courtesy, I remain

Yours very truly,
HENRY VAN ARSDALE.

PROBLEMS IN RELATION TO THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY HEALTH OFFICE

By J. L. Pomeroy, M. D.

If the public health work of a county health office is to successfully meet the demands of the keen driving force of efficiency experts, we shall need new and broader legislation; more generous budget allowances and a kind of co-operation that is not interference. If the day of shotgun methods of sanitation is really passed, if the new spirit of national preparedness is a vital reaction, and if the awakening of all the powerful social forces to the great problem of national conservation of life represents an actual desire of the people of the nation, and not a kind of national hysteria, then the health officer should be able to plan on the basis of efficiency and economy, and go forward with a full support of all the best of these agencies. We must in truth react to these national movements in no uncertain way. Either the health officer must organize his forces along proper administrative lines with an accurate budget system; must outline his work with a rigid system of relative values, and properly segregated functions, or those great social forces which have already so successfully handled certain phases of the work will permanently invade the field of public health.

There are at the present time many influences in public work conceived for the performance of certain functions which, on close examination, invade the domain of public health. Besides official agencies of various state and municipal bureaus, there are many powerful voluntary agencies which must be considered. It would appear that whatever belongs to public health should come under the administration of those forces legally intended by the state to administer this function. I regret the widespread tendency to parcel out the business of the various functions of public health to a multiplicity of agencies demanding the co-operation of the local health officer to his great confusion and often actual bewilderment. Such conditions lead to actual overlapping, much waste of public money and in times of stress, diffusion of energy.

I would like, therefore, to outline briefly some actual problems in relation to county health office of Los Angeles:

The county health office is apparently designed to take care of the problems of rural hygiene. The term "rural" in Los Angeles County is somewhat lacking in precision. Our present territory covers in the aggregate nearly 4000 square miles. In this section we have a combination of desert, mountain valley and costal region. We have the great metropolis of Los Angeles city—the third largest in area in the United States—and 36 smaller municipalities which are incorporated. In addition to these incorporated cities are about 35 groups of people living under conditions approximating the small city. In one section we have a group of 12,000 people, which is in no sense rural. The percentage of people living in places of 2500 or more in Los Angeles county in 1910 was 81.7 per cent, an increase of 11.1 per cent over 1900. The marvelous development of our good road system, the rapid transit facilities and conditions of labor have made of our county almost one large family. The facilities for the rapid spread of disease, the tendencies for influences affecting one locality to reach far distant places are a factor of modern development quite recent indeed. No longer does a city or town live in isolation characteristic of the time when most of our public health laws were written. While it is true that a relatively large percentage of people still live under rural conditions a vital part of the entire county, and the public health work of the county must inevitably be reorganized to meet these changed influences.

The life of the health office depends upon the budget. The preparation of a scientific budget means an accurate knowledge of vital statistics, and if true economy is to be effected, an efficient administrative system. Financing is a business in itself, and the demands of the present day compel us to weigh each function according to some standard of relative value, which will accomplish definite results in the prevention of disease.

An enormous amount of publicity has been given the cause of rural sanitation in the United States. Practically we have had to deal in our budget making with the simple expenditures of the past few years as a basis.

I will submit a few figures:

In 1912-13 there were 439 cases of communicable disease, with 333 deaths. The total deaths from all causes was 1208. Expense of the health office, $7.330.19.

In 1913-14 there were 275 cases of communicable disease with 335 deaths. Total deaths, all causes, 1,140. Total expense of the health office, $5,452.09.

In 1914-15 there were 634 cases of communicable disease reported, with 358 fatalities. Total expense of the health office, 7,022.00.

In May, 1915, when I took charge of the office, the staff consisted simply of the health officer and fumigator. During the past year and a half we have added one stenographic clerk, a deputy health officer and two rural nurses, with a total expense last year of $9,659.42. Our budget for the coming year gives us $15,297.07. During the past year we have traveled over 26,000 miles throughout the county.

The experience of the past eighteen months brings me to the following conclusions:

First: That scientific budget making of a county health office such as Los Angeles county, should be based upon a district organization in order to effect a real economy in transportation and rapidity of action with the development of the local community spirit which would naturally follow the full-time district health officer.

The fate of the public health work of the unincorporated section and the small city is absolutely identical. Their administrative unity is rapidly becoming a necessity. The spread of infectious disease does not recognize any political subdivisions or city boundaries whatever. Under the present system we can increase our budget from year to year indefinitely, but without any corresponding increase in efficiency, nor can we force the smaller city to automatically improve conditions or increase the budget.

A survey of 29 small cities in Los Angeles county, representing 73,000 people, showed that there was appropriated last year for the prevention of disease less than $6000. Of 33 towns there were five without properly organized health boards or health officers. In these cities we have been compelled to make investigations and actually perform their work. In five cities the health officer receives $5 a month; in three cities, $10 a month; in three cities, $20 to $30; in four cities, $40; in two cities, $50 a month. It can easily be seen that no matter to what extent we build up our county health office, the ultimate fate of the public health work outside of the larger cities depend upon the efficiency of the small town. The fact that a particular locality is backward in public health hampers our efficiency very greatly, but should not relieve it of the responsibility therefor.

Second: Vital Statistics. As the basis of all proper administration is an accurate knowledge of vital statistics, the present conditions are very confusing. Many deaths from our territory take place in the hospitals in the towns. Our own bureau of vital statistics is under the county recorder, which does not offer us adequate facilities, and furthermore, the returns from the smaller cities are sent direct to Sacramento.

We greatly need a clearing house on vital statistics that would segregate these deaths to the territory where they properly should be charged.

In conclusion I beg to state that it is an extremely difficult matter to cover the fundamentals of efficient health work in a few moments or to adequately describe the great difficulty which modern progress has created by complex organizations working in the same field.

The solution of the difficulties in Los Angeles county is the establishment by law of a means of the organization of small cities and rural territory into districts, in which the administration should be centralized in a full-time health officer in such a manner that the county would be divided, exclusive of the city of Los Angeles, into about seven districts. Under such a system the county health office could act as a clearing house for all of the districts in the county, and its various functions could be separated in such a manner that the present overlapping would cease to exist.

CHILD LABOR

Although in 1916 the president signed the federal law relating to child labor, the law will not go into effect until September, 1917. The national law will then free only those children making products which are shipped from state to state, about 150,000 children. This is only seven per cent of the children at work, estimated at two million. The European war has increased the number of child workers in the United States. Of the huge number, 93 per cent must go on until rescued by state laws and state officers.

HATS

The hat is an ingenious contraption invented by man to give the top of his head something to do.

But its usefulness doesn't stop there. A man can get a lot of fun out of his hat if he just knows how.

Some men have reduced their hats to a science. They make them pastimes, exercise and employment. They take them out windy days and chase them. Or mix them up at restaurants and fight about them with strangers. And when they have nothing else to do they use them to talk through.

The hat is what some men always pass and no woman does.

GLENDALE NEW THOUGHT CENTER

Sunday evening at the New Thought Center Mrs. Adeline Becker gave the lecture as an advanced lesson along New Thought lines, the subject being "The Serpent that Swallows Its Tail." She said in part: The serpent was used by the ancients as the symbol of universal mind, infinite wisdom. "The Serpent that Swallows Its Tail," forming a perfect circle, sybolizes immortality. God as personality could not be omnipresent, but God as universal mind everywhere present. The speaker included the Lord's prayer with New Thought interpretations in her lesson. With the right understanding of the law laid down by the Christ, all may come in conscious touch with the great storehouse of infinite supply. Prayer rightly understood becomes a scientific statement. Prosperity is one of the things New Thought stands for, not hoarding great wealth. "Give us this day our daily bread" does not mean bread alone, but a full supply of all good for all our needs.

Dr. Riley will have charge of the Sunday evening service this week. "Communion" subject of lecture. Service begins promptly at 8 o'clock p. m. The Sunday school will convene at 10 o'clock a. m. "Am I good enough for you?" sighed the fond lover.

"No," said the girl, candidly, "you're not, but you are too good for any other girl."—New York Times.
